HOW TO USE THE DIRECTORY OF BUYERS

This Directory of Buyers is offered by Idaho Commerce & Labor to help businesses expand markets for goods and services. Contained in the directory are addresses, phone numbers, Web sites and contacts of buying offices for large businesses and state and federal agencies in Idaho and around the country. Most contacts are either buyers or small business specialists responsible for helping companies do business with their agency or firm.

Many government agencies and large businesses require potential vendors to complete vendor registration packets, which can be obtained by calling or writing contacts listed in the directory. Once you register as a vendor, obtain the name of the buyer that purchases your company's products or services. Most buyers are assigned to procure specific categories of goods or services. For example, one buyer may purchase computer equipment while another buyer, within the organization, is responsible for purchasing aircraft components.

Often the individual buyers maintain their own bidders' list for vendors that can supply the commodities they procure. To be included on the list, call or write the buyer handling the products or services you sell, advising him or her of your interest and furnishing information regarding your firm's qualifications. Then follow-up periodically with that buyer as you would with any potential customer.

Price is often a primary consideration in contract award. But other factors such as quality, past performance and delivery schedules that may be of equal or greater importance in determining the award of a contract.

The aggressive and responsive business will usually make the sale.

The Directory of Buyers is only one of many services offered to Idaho businesses through the Idaho Business Network (IBN). Other services include:

- Customized federal and state bidding opportunities, delivered by e-mail or conventional mail;
- "How To" marketing assistance for selling to government agencies and large prime contractors;
- Access to the Military and Federal Standards and Specifications supplied, upon request;
- One-on-one procurement technical assistance;
- Federal Acquisition Regulations (FAR), interpretation and assistance;
- Electronic commerce market research and technical assistance;
- Central Contractor Registration (CCR) assistance;
- Bid document interpretation and assistance, market research including procurement histories, buying activities, and points of contact;
- Business advocacy.

For further information about the Idaho Business Network, please call Idaho Commerce and Labor at (208) 334-2470 or email ibn@business.idaho.gov.

ERROR AND OMISSIONS

IF YOU FIND ERRORS OR OMISSIONS, PLEASE LET US KNOW

The Idaho Business Network has worked diligently to be as complete and accurate as possible with the information in the Directory of Buyers. The directory will be updated periodically. Please advise the Idaho Business Network staff if you know of inaccuracies or omissions. Contact the Idaho Commerce & Labor, 700 West State, P.O. Box

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE AGENCIES

The Department of Defense, one of the federal governments largest agencies, has several hundred purchasing offices. The Department has four major services: the Army, the Navy, the Air Force and the Defense Logistics Agency, each of which has several buying offices.

These offices purchase items from aircraft carriers, to legal services, to hosiery from the private sector. The Department of Defense is ready to do business on a competitive basis with firms that can supply the needed products or services.

AIR LOGISTICS CENTER SOURCE DEVELOPMENT OFFICES

There are three Air Logistics Centers (ALCs) within AFMC. These centers are responsible for worldwide logistics support to include repair, modification and the acquisition of spare parts required to sustain the readiness of AF weapon systems. Each center purchases supplies and services needed to operate an Air Force base.

DEFENSE COMMISSARY AGENCIES

Most military bases have commissaries where personnel purchase groceries and other items. Stock assortment is similar to supermarkets. Each military commissary in the continental United States is assigned to a commissary region. Most items purchased by the military for resale in commissaries are obtained by placing calls against contracts established by the HQ Defense Commissary Agency, Ft. Lee, Virginia. Other items are obtained through contracts written by the supporting local contracting office. For more information contact:

DEFENSE CONTRACT MANAGEMENT AGENCY

The mission of the Defense Contract Management Agency (DCMA) is the administration of defense contracts for the military through a nationwide network of district, geographic management offices. DCMA is responsible for ensuring that products and services are delivered from industry as agreed upon (price, quality, delivery date, etc.). DCMA administers most defense contracts with the exception of certain special categories such as aircraft, tanks, ships and submarines. Defense Contract Management District West, located in Carson, California, is responsible for management and centralized functions. The Seattle DCMA includes the geographic area of Washington, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, and Alaska. For additional information contact:

DEFENSE LOGISTICS AGENCY PROCUREMENT OFFICES

The mission of the Defense Logistics Agency is to provide common supplies and services to the military and civilian agencies. Interested bidders and suppliers should deal directly with appropriate supply centers and depots. Each supply center is responsible for procuring different types of supplies and equipment. The supply centers procure products and services for the U.S. Military and government agencies worldwide. Most of the products and services are purchased through their offices, but are delivered to end-users throughout the world. The five supply centers, and their procurement responsibilities, are listed below.

NATIONAL PARK SERVICE

The National Park Service administers three hundred plus areas in the System. There are three principal categories used in classification: natural areas, historical areas, and recreational areas. The National Parks are used by approximately 250 million visitors annually, which makes a significant contribution to the economy of the Nation. From this enormous visitation, most benefits go to business in the form of food, lodging, and travel expenditures. Many other benefits, however, are passed on to the local or national firms by way of services or supplies actually required to operate and maintain the National Park System.

The National Park Service expends approximately $200 million annually for goods and services acquired under contract. Over 90 percent of these dollars go to small businesses. The majority of the procurement dollars are spent in the area of construction. The remainder is spent for automated data processing, hardware, software and services, maintenance services, professional services including architect and engineering services, heavy equipment and various other supply-type items. U.S. BUREAU OF RECLAMATION

Congress created the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation in 1902 to reclaim the arid lands of the West through irrigation and to stimulate the settlement and economic development of the region. Currently, the BLM manages a variety of water-related functions, including flood control, irrigation, recreational facilities and hydroelectric power generation. The types of commodities and services commonly purchased include construction of multi-million dollar dams, power plant generator, upgrades, hydro meteorological equipment, janitorial services and everyday office supplies. U.S. FOREST SERVICE

The U.S. Forest Service provides leadership in the management, protection and use of the nations forest and rangelands. The Forest Service obtains most of its commonly used supplies and services from the government stores operated by the General Services Administration (GSA) or vendors that have entered into federal supply contracts with GSA. Items or services that cannot be filled through GSA are purchased directly from private businesses. The Intermountain Region and Intermountain Research Station have offices at 16 national forests, 76 ranger districts, and 8 research laboratories. Each of the national forest offices in Idaho buy small quantities of supplies and services. Large or volume purchases are made through the central buying offices listed below. Additional information about Forest Service purchasing, contracting, or placement on a bidders list may be obtained from any of these offices:

U.S. GENERAL SERVICE ADMINISTRATION

The U.S. General Service Administration (GSA) is the federal government's business agent. GSA provides the supplies, workspace and support other federal agencies require. For example: GSA rents, builds and repairs office space; buys and maintains office equipment and furniture; purchases supplies ranging from pens, to paint, to high-capacity pumps; contracts for services as varied as auto maintenance and teleprocessing. GSA also sells worn, outdated, or confiscated items for federal agencies. GSA actively seeks new bidders and increased competition for its supply and service contracts. U.S. DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY NATIONAL LABORATORIES AND OTHER DOE SITES

IDAHO NATIONAL LABORATORY

The Idaho National Laboratory (INL), located in southeast Idaho, is the site of a broad range of facilities. It has the worlds largest and most varied collection of nuclear reactors, including research, testing, power and propulsion units. Extensive programs for nuclear waste management and processing of nuclear fuel are operated at the site. Also, the INL is involved in programs related to the research, development and demonstration of other sources of energy, such as industrial conservation, electric vehicles and coal gasification.

The U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) Idaho office has responsibility for overall management of the INL including support services. The Idaho office also administers programs for DOE at other locations outside the state.

STATE OF IDAHO

All state agencies have the authorization to procure services, goods, equipment, parts, or supplies within specified dollar amounts. Typically, the Division of Purchasing handles procurements over $25,000.

The Division of Public Works administers most state building and construction projects, including administrative office buildings. However, the Departments of Transportation, Parks and Recreation, Lands and Fish and Game have the authority of administering their own building and construction projects.

For more detail on state procurement regulations visit www2.state.id.us/adm
